| Comments |
| We do not have a studio for journalism—our journalism program is print and web-oriented (we have a television studio on the other side of our campus for our Film/Video program) |
| We have a dedicated room for the Mesa Press that they use for their classroom and to create the campus newspaper • We don't have a TV program on our campus so we don't have a need for this type of classroom. |
| We have a dedicated newsroom and a small sound room, no light grid. Cost about $20,000 per year for printing |
| Receives CTEA funding • Expects a request for studio in future |

The Clarion newsroom (Technology Center 123) is about half the size of a regular classroom. It has one conference table in the center and a counter top anchored to three walls. The counter top supports 15 desktop computers. Students use the conference table for their laptops.

we have a dedicated classroom/newsroom with about 16 desktop computers that is devoted to the Journalism program. It has an adjoining conference room where the editorial staff meet.

g and lighting grid. The studio is not used
